

27% of voters lack confidence that votes in presidential election will be counted accurately

July 22, 2020: Twenty-seven percent (27%) of voters lack confidence that their votes will be accurately counted in the upcoming presidential election. That total includes 20% who are not very confident and 7% who are not at all confident the correct winner will be declared.[1]

The distrust is spread evenly across the partisan divide. Twenty-six percent (26%) of Republicans lack confidence as do 26% of Democrats. Among independent voters, 29% aren't confident the correct winner will be declared president.[1]

Other survey data found that, in a close election, 50% believe Republicans will cheat to try and steal the election. Thirty-eight percent (38%) believe the Democrats will do the same.[2]

Each weekday, Scott Rasmussen's Number of the Day explores interesting and newsworthy topics at the intersection of culture, politics, and technology. Columns published on Ballotpedia reflect the views of the author. Scott Rasmussen's Number of the Day is published by Ballotpedia weekdays at 9:00 a.m. Eastern. Columns published on Ballotpedia reflect the views of the author.

Footnotes:

1. JusttheNews.com, "Nearly 30% of U.S. voters not confident Nov election will be accurately counted with correct winner," July 16, 2020
2. JusttheNews.com, "Trust breakdown: Democrats and Republicans think other side will cheat to steal POTUS election," July 20, 2020