60% of voters say it's very important to limit the power of big corporations

July 31, 2020: Sixty percent (60%) of voters nationwide say it's very important to place limits on the power of big corporations. A Scott Rasmussen national survey found that another 28% consider it somewhat important to do so.[1]

The survey also found that 62% think it's very important to place limits on the power of governments. And 28% say that's somewhat important.[1]

Majorities of every measured demographic group consider both of these objectives to be very important.[1]
